Description

A 19th century hand carved wooden bowl.

Wooden bowls have been used by various cultures for thousands of years, dating back to prehistoric times. Early humans carved bowls from wood using rudimentary tools for eating, storage, and rituals. By the Middle Ages, skilled artisans began crafting more refined bowls, often using hardwoods like maple, oak, or cherry. Wooden bowls were particularly popular in rural areas due to the abundance of materials. Over time, they evolved from practical tools to artisanal pieces, valued for their beauty and craftsmanship.
