Description

A 19th century Chinese bronze cloisonné enamel Koro censer in the form of a duck on a river reed base, circa 1850. From the collection of Lady Mariam Marks, Baroness Broughton.

A Koro censer is a traditional Japanese incense burner, often crafted from metals like bronze or silver. Characterised by its intricate designs and sometimes elaborate, decorative elements, it features a perforated lid for releasing aromatic smoke. Used in religious and ceremonial contexts, the Koro censer enhances the ambience with its aesthetic and sensory qualities.
