Description

An elegant Orrefors glass bud vase designed by Sven Palmqvist, circa 1960. This beautifully restrained Scandinavian design is distinguished by its clear, luminous glass, refined proportions, and quiet sculptural presence.

Palmqvist was one of the most influential figures in 20th-century Swedish glass, celebrated for designs that united technical confidence with exceptional simplicity. Here, the purity of the material is allowed to take centre stage: the glass gathers and reflects light, while the vase's considered form offers a perfect setting for a single stem, a small gathered posy, or a delicate branch.

Made by Orrefors, the renowned Swedish glassworks, this vase reflects the enduring appeal of mid-century Scandinavian design-functional, elegant, and timeless. Its compact scale makes it wonderfully versatile: equally at home on a dining table, desk, bedside table, or displayed as a small work of glass sculpture.

A refined and collectible piece of Swedish modern design, ideal for admirers of Orrefors, Sven Palmqvist, and the clean-lined aesthetic of the 1960s.
