Description

An Art Deco Walker & Hall silver plate cocktail shaker circa 1925.

Walker and Hall was founded in Sheffield in 1845 by George Walker. The firm grew rapidly during the Victorian era, producing high-quality silverware, cutlery, and electroplated goods for both domestic and international markets. It gained royal recognition after supplying items for Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, boosting its prestige.

By the late nineteenth century, Walker and Hall operated multiple showrooms across Britain and abroad. The company became known for combining craftsmanship with industrial innovation. Although it declined during the twentieth century amid changing tastes and competition, its pieces remain notably prized by collectors and museums worldwide today for their elegance enduring.
