Description

A fine Regency yellow gold, probably 15ct, love token brooch, with multicolour stones on an agate base, circa 1820.

Love token brooches are sentimental jewellery pieces that became popular in the early 19th century. Often crafted from precious metals and adorned with intricate designs, they featured romantic symbols like hearts, flowers, and initials. These brooches were exchanged as tokens of affection between lovers or as mementoes of courtship. Their delicate craftsmanship and emotional significance made them cherished keepsakes, reflecting the romantic ideals of the Regency era.
