Description

A Victorian cast iron ornate stick stand with diamond foundry registration stamp, circa 1879.

Victorian cast iron stick stands were elegant and functional hall furniture, popular during the 19th century. Crafted from ornate cast iron, they often featured intricate patterns, floral motifs, or gothic designs, reflecting the decorative tastes of the Victorian era.

These stands were used to hold umbrellas, walking sticks, and canes, typically placed near the entrance of homes. Durable yet artistic, they served as a symbol of status and sophistication while providing practicality in daily life.
